Fatuma's First Day of School

Fatuma is happy. Today is the first day of school. She is starting grade four.

Fatuma wakes up early. She sweeps the house, washes and gets dressed for school. She puts on her school uniform – a shirt, sweater, leggings, skirt and sandals. She gets her book bag and begins her long walk to school.

As Fatuma nears the school, she becomes excited. She runs to the gate. There she meets many friends. She hurries to her classroom. When she gets near the classroom, she stops hurrying and walks slowly. She is greeted at the door by the teacher, Ato Robale. He welcomes her. Then he says, "Please sit at a desk."

Fatuma chooses a desk and sits down. She looks around the classroom. She sees many objects. There are two windows and one door. There are many desks and benches. The teacher has a table with papers, books, chalk, pens and a ruler. The teacher also has a chair. There is a big chalkboard on the wall.

When Anito asks if he can do the work alone, his sister and brother always tell him, “No, you are too small.”

One night while Anito is sleeping, he dreams that he sees pink sugar cane growing in a beautiful field. He is curious. He has never seen pink sugar cane. He cuts a piece and chews it as he walks home. While he is walking, his body begins to feel strange. He is growing taller and heavier! When the family sees Anito, they become afraid of him. They think he is a stranger. They do not allow the taller and heavier Anito in the compound. Anito is sad that his family does not know him. But one year there is no rain and the next year, again, there is no rain. Rivers dry up, plants and seeds do not grow and people and animals have no food. The village elders are very worried and hold many meetings to talk about the problem.

One day, one of the elders says that he knows how to make the rains come. Everyone is excited and they ask him to tell them his idea. He says, “There is a woman called Kinchiwot in the next village. She is a rainmaker. Let us send people from our village to talk to her.”

The elders all agree. They send three men with gifts to Kinchiwot. The men tell her about their problems and ask her to help them. After listening to their problems, she says, “I will try to help you now, but you have to protect your environment. You must plant trees so that the rains will always come.”

They thank her and go back to their village. When they arrive home, they are very surprised to see the rain falling. ## Healthy Eating

To be healthy, we need to eat staple foods, vegetables, meat or pulses and fruit.

The food we eat every day is called a staple food. In the northern highlands of Ethiopia, farmers grow cereals such as wheat and teff for making bread and injera. In the south they grow maize and sorghum to make porridge, kinche, kita and injera. They also grow enset to make kocho. Ethiopians eat these staple foods with fresh vegetables such as cabbage and spinach or with meat or pulses such as chick peas, lentils or split peas.

Farmers throughout Ethiopia grow many different vegetables to provide healthy food to feed their families and to sell at the market. In arid regions pastoralists raise camels, sheep and goats. People who are lucky enough to live near a lake or river often catch fresh fish to eat and to sell. Vegetables, fish, milk and meat from animals help children to grow up fit and strong.

Some families in Ethiopia raise their own sheep, goats and cattle (cows and oxen) which they sell and sometimes butcher for food. Many more families have a few chickens in their compound. Their eggs are always tasty and good to eat.

Children in every region love to pick ripe fruits from the trees: papaya, oranges, bananas, mangoes and avocados. All of these delicious fruits help them to stay healthy and fight off disease.

Bacha Learns to Plough

It is a beautiful, sunny day in May. The sky is clear and blue. Bacha's father, Mulata, says: "You are growing big and strong. This is a fine day for me to show you how to plough."

Mulata drives the oxen to the field and there he shows his son how to attach the plough with strong ropes. Then Mulata shows him how to hold the handle of the plough as he guides the oxen to make straight wide lines. Then Mulata hands over the plough to Bacha and says: "Now it's your turn."

At first, Bacha finds the work very tiring. It is difficult to keep the edge of the plough straight and the soil sticks to his feet, so it is hard to walk in the deep furrows the plough makes. Luckily the oxen are strong and good at their work and so they plough on and on until the work is done.

Mulata says, "Well done, Bacha! The first time is always difficult. You will find it easy the next time." Bacha is proud of his work. He thinks the ploughed field looks beautiful.
